Madison consistently ranks as a top community in which to live, work, play and raise a family. Many pieces fit together to help create the enviable picture of a desirable community that boasts an extremely high quality of life for its residents and a high level of attraction for visitors.

We are blessed, for example, with nationally renowned outdoor events and activities. We are a top-ranked community for young professionals, and are recognized as a leader in the area of life science ingenuity. We have an abundance of diverse dining and entertainment options, and we enjoy unique and vibrant neighborhoods. Less well-known, but critical to supporting our thriving community and overall quality of life, are our valuable regional assets that help drive economic vitality, attract people from across the state and around the world, and bring new opportunities to our area every year.

Monona Terrace is honored to have been a part of this strong community fabric, contributing to the accomplishments and the well-deserved accolades, of the past 20 years. It took many decades to make Frank Lloyd Wright’s vision a reality, and in the two decades since it began operation, Monona Terrace has developed into a significant local and regional economic driver and a true community cornerstone.

We are proud this iconic regional center has not only grown to become a top global convention and visitor attraction, but has also played a major role in helping to enrich the quality of life for Madisonians over the last two decades – from local businesses, to local residents, local government, regional groups and organizations.

The numbers speak volumes. More than 7.9 million visitors have participated in the 15,000+ events hosted at Monona Terrace since the doors first opened. That business has generated $550 million in economic impact and has supported more than 1,500 community events over that period of time. We are proud to have reached these goals and even more pleased that the level of customer service has not wavered – demonstrated by the 98% overall customer satisfaction rating.

Although the past 20 years have been filled with many important milestones for Monona Terrace and measurable positive impact on the Madison region, the 2017 annual report focuses on celebrating recent accomplishments that have been achieved through collaboration with our strategic partners across the region to enrich the important role of the convention and visitor industry. We see evidence of this in the many developments currently in progress and in the groundswell of interest in investing in some of our community’s greatest resources. One such example is the Madison Design Professionals’ Nolen Waterfront concepts, which include a potential opportunity to expand Monona Terrace. Another important piece is the work underway to further a new master plan for the Alliant Energy Center and surrounding area redevelopment.

With a solid foundation securely in place, the vision for the future is bright and full of promise. The ongoing successful operation of Monona Terrace, coupled with the development of other regional assets that complement and support our primary business, has helped create an environment of confidence for additional investment in downtown Madison. We are proud of the value that Monona Terrace adds to the quality of life for our entire region and we look forward to working with our valued partners in the convention and visitor industry to grow our contributions and create an even stronger and more vibrant community – both as a destination for visitors and as a treasured community asset that benefits everyone in our area.

Gregg McManners, Executive Director
Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center
Madison, Wisconsin
“We create our buildings and then they create us. Likewise, we construct our circle of friends and our communities and then they construct us.” - Frank Lloyd Wright

For two decades, Frank Lloyd Wright’s vision of creating a space for communities to come together, and for important work to be done, has come to life within the walls and open spaces of Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center. This revered community gathering venue has continued to grow and prosper and draw in more and more people each year. The positive influence it has had on the local economy, the quality of life of area residents, and the impact on myriad groups that convened under and upon the roof of this prestigious lakeside destination, is profound.

But Mr. Wright’s vision didn’t stop there. Because we now know what can happen when a grand gathering place such as Monona Terrace is added to the center of a vibrant city, we are compelled to ensure it continues to evolve and grow to meet the changing needs of all its guests.

As members of the Monona Terrace Board of Directors, we take this responsibility very seriously. With every decision we make, with every budget that is approved, an eye on how the decision impacts the individuals, the organizations, businesses and the larger community is at the core. Whether visitors to Monona Terrace come for conventions, conferences, community events like Dane Dances or Rooftop Concerts, they have transformed the brick and mortar of the facility into a living, breathing community essential.

When Mr. Wright intimated that a well-conceived building could impact individuals and change the course of their lives, he was indeed, right. We as a community are different – better – because of Monona Terrace. We are financially stronger because of the more than $550 million Monona Terrace has contributed to the local economy since opening. We are a tighter knit community because of the hundreds of community programming events each year at Monona Terrace that bring us together. And through our strategic partnerships with organizations like the Greater Madison Convention and Visitors Bureau and Downtown Madison, Inc., we are a destination location for visitors from around the globe.

We are blessed to be celebrating 20 years of being a part of the fabric of the Madison region in 2017. It was an incredible year, as you will see throughout this report. Our engagement with the community has continued to grow and provide unique opportunities for all of the residents of our region to enjoy the many abundant features of downtown Madison. Our economic engine – conventions – has also grown stronger over the past year, allowing us to draw in new people and new dollars for our local businesses and our local economy. We value this balance of community offerings and global convention business that allows us the ability to significantly enrich our community on an annual basis.

The Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center Board of Directors continues to stand ready to work hand in hand with local leaders, businesses and organizations to realize the full potential that Monona Terrace and future developments and community enhancements can bring our local residents, our region, our state and our convention goers from across the globe.

Glenn Krieg, Chair
Monona Terrace Board of Directors
Madison, Wisconsin
he competition for securing conventions and events for a destination heightens every day. Cities like Nashville are investing billions in infrastructure to grow their visitor and event economy. New hotels, convention centers and entertainment complexes are popping up everywhere. In Wisconsin, Green Bay, Wisconsin Dells and La Crosse are all bullishly investing so they can capture more event business and their event attendees’ dollars.

Madison has, with a few exceptions, enjoyed two strong decades of visitor business. Our city’s event infrastructure – including the cornerstone, world-class Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center – our perennial marquee event calendar and the city’s energetic vibe have created an excellent foundation for convention, sports and other visitor business.

But as any community or business knows, you cannot stand still if you want to thrive.

As we look to the future, we see momentum being generated by the successful growth of some of our key regional assets, and many exciting new projects emerging to support our growing visitor economy. The Greater Madison Convention and Visitors Bureau (GMCVB) is committed to doing everything we can to ensure all of the various pieces of the puzzle come together to create the optimal visitor experience and give the Madison region the competitive advantage.

This contagious energy and positive movement will help sustain our growing reputation as a “top, small city convention destination” as noted by meetingsource.com in January 2018. We strive to advocate for and support priority infrastructure projects that optimize the area’s livability potential, and are thrilled with the forward progress in quality hotel development and enhancements with the new AC Madison, enhanced Park Hotel, the impending construction of a hotel at Judge Doyle Square, and possible hotel development on State Street and on the downtown Madison College site. The growing concept of enhancing the Alliant Energy Center campus is another key ingredient to our future success, as well as the critical importance of air access. The announcement of planned significant terminal upgrades, new non-stop air service to/from San Francisco coupled with the news that Truax may be the site of new Air Force F-35’s, reflects confidence in this market and in the future of our Dane County Regional Airport.

Tourism is a competitive industry, and it requires deliberate planning and targeted effort to showcase the area’s unique assets and entice visitors and event planners to choose Madison. To do that, the GMCVB along with the Madison Area Sports Commission are focusing efforts on branding and storytelling, including content about our wonderfully diverse neighborhoods.

We are initiating a destination development strategy that supports existing attractions, building fresh, new, authentic visitor experiences, continuing focus on securing events such as the Reebok CrossFit Games, and creating new events such as our unique Bucky on Parade.

With the positive relationships and collaborations the GMCVB has with the professional team at Monona Terrace, and with our hotel and other sector partners, we are able to be nimble and adjust our efforts, based on the current national landscape and our overall competitive picture.

We are fortunate to live in and have the privilege of promoting a city that exudes energy and inspiration. We are grateful visitors tell us they leave Madison with their senses fulfilled and satisfied. And we are proud to represent a place that doesn’t rest on its laurels but challenges itself to look ahead. That’s what it takes to stay competitive.

Deb Archer, CDME, President & CEO
Greater Madison Convention & Visitors Bureau and Madison Area Sports Commission
For decades, downtown Madison has been a major destination for visitors from all over the region and the world. A vibrant scene of events, businesses, activities and attractions coupled with the physical beauty of our city and lakes make downtown Madison a destination on par with the best. The economic impact visitor spending has on our community continues to grow and we can’t take that for granted. Much time, work and investment have gone into making our downtown what it is today. And, to remain competitive and attractive, we need to continue to support and invest in the elements that make our city great.

Many attribute the resurgence of downtown Madison to the opening of Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center in 1997. This impressive facility draws hundreds of thousands of people to our region, generating revenue for our city and enhancing the quality of life for those of us who live and work here. As shown in the Downtown Madison, Inc. 2017 State of the Downtown report, the economic benefit from conferences and conventions at Monona Terrace since opening in 1997 has been an astounding $517 million (as of YE 2016). In 2016 alone, the tourism industry as a whole generated over $257 million in direct visitor spending in our downtown. These are new dollars coming into our community, helping to support and enhance our local food, retail, service and entertainment economy. These are enhancements from which we all benefit!

Over the course of the past twenty years, significant public-private investment in major tourist destinations has also added to the vibrancy of our city and downtown. There was the opening of the Kohl Center in 1998, the addition of Overture Center for the Arts and Madison Museum of Contemporary Art in 2004, the new Madison Children’s Museum and Wisconsin Institutes for Discovery in 2010, Union South in 2011 and the new Madison Central Library in 2013. In 2014 we welcomed the New Holland Pavilion at Alliant Energy Center, and in 2015 the Henry Vilas Zoo Arctic Passage, as well as major renovations at Camp Randall Stadium, Breese Stevens Field and Memorial Union. The list could go on. In 2016 there were over 11 million visits to major attractions in the downtown area alone.

In addition, hotel development activity in downtown Madison is booming with no signs of stopping. Since 2010 the number of hotel rooms in the downtown has increased by 35% with more rooms to be added in the next few years. As we work to ensure that downtown Madison is an economic engine for our region, we need to support opportunities that will help maximize the economic impact of Monona Terrace, bringing new dollars, additional tax revenue, and more jobs and business activity to our community.

Looking toward the future, continued investment in projects such as Judge Doyle Square, Alliant Energy Center, Breese Stevens Field, and the Nolen Waterfront is necessary and will help to ensure our downtown remains an economically strong, enjoyable, welcoming and beautiful place for all.

Jason Ilstrup, President
Downtown Madison, Inc.
Twenty years ago, Madison’s skyline changed as Monona Terrace opened its doors to the public and introduced a new community and convention center to the people of our region. Now as we celebrate our 20th anniversary, a hearty thank you is extended to the community for its support over the years. While Frank Lloyd Wright never saw the completion of his project or the realization of “the long awaited wedding between the city and beautiful Lake Monona,” he certainly would be proud of the role Monona Terrace has played, not only in the visual beauty of the Madison skyline, but also as an economic engine and community gathering place for his beloved Madison.
